As you can see here (MSB01 is a patched version for Vista 64 bits with SP1. Here are the steps. 1) Run the installation (of MSB01. 2) Reboot your computer. 3) Run a task manager (ctrl + alt + delete). The main page should give you the option to choose which patcher you want (simple or advanced). The same does the button "remove". After that just remove the patcher folder. 4) Run the installation. Delete any non signed archives. I do not have a working method to reset the archiving of the OS to default values. I finally googled for a method to do so. I found this message. There's a batch file at the root of Win 7 C:\Program Files (x86)\Windows Kits\8.1\Windows Performance Toolkit\DriverPatching\spa1bak.bat. You can run it with run - it won't hurt.Since my last visit to the Valley (Somewhere under the walking bridge) for Lunar New Year, my pronunciation has improved tremendously. I can now confidently stand up in front of a group of Hong Kong friends and pronounce Cantonese in a live class. I even gave my friends a little lesson. But having being in the middle of a group of Hong Kong friends, I still found it difficult to communicate with people (in the more polite sense of the word). The people were of varying nationalities: Chinese, Malaysian, Filipino, Indonesian, and people who sounded like I was the first time in Australia. I was really very thankful for my Chinese friends who understood what I was trying to say but it was still daunting to have to face the other people. The reason for this is that my understanding of Chinese is not complete. I know the basic structures and my knowledge of Chinese grammar is getting much better but I still didn't find the ability to completely communicate without my linguistic knowledge. Not even with my Chinese friends who understand so much better. I took one month off to study Chinese so that I would be able to speak to the Chinese people of Australia better but I didn't think it would be enough to really change 648931e174
