It's essentially the same, except instead of painting on a virtual canvas, you're coloring an actual image. Open the Brush Tool options by choosing Window > Brush/Other Tools. The Brush Tool tab is the most important one to master. Use it to customize its settings to your liking, if you feel you need to. Let's explore how to do so. To see the Brush Tool's different settings, open the Brush Options window by choosing Window > Brush/Options. You'll see a variety of options that you can customize according to your liking. The settings available depend on how you've set up your foreground and background colors. Common settings you'll want to modify based on these considerations include: Size: Adjust the brush's physical size that you want to use. A size of 20 will make the brush less detailed, while an 8 means it'll be very detailed and accurate. If you find the brush too large or small, don't worry. You can always change both its physical size and its size in the Canvas. Remember to Adhere to Canvas Size to change your actual screen size to match what the brush will be using. e3d0a04c9c
