Q: Is there a way to include an arbitrary module in SystemJS? I am trying to include angular-ui-bootstrap in a Typescript project using SystemJS, however I am unable to find a way to include it. I can include any other module I need within the same file, but when I try to include "ui.bootstrap" I get "Can't resolve 'ui.bootstrap' in 'xxx' I've tried adding a web-config to SystemJS to include the module, but that doesn't seem to work either. SystemJS Config

System.config({ map: { ui: '.././node_modules/angular-ui-bootstrap/ui' }, packages: { 'ui.bootstrap': { main: 'index.js', defaultExtension: 'js' } }, });
```

A: The problem is: angular-ui-bootstrap comes as a package that has been installed as an npm module. So when you try to use it as a module (angular-ui-bootstrap), its src directory should contain your JS files. But when you use SystemJS, it is not able to find the correct files inside the package. The way to do that is using an exclusion config in your SystemJS map: map: { //... 'angular-ui-bootstrap': 'path/to/your/module/src', //... }, And the rest of the code doesn't change. See the docs.
